WHO WILL BE THE NOMINEE

Of Republican Congressional Convention

Not Believed That Mr. Morehead Will Allow His Name To Go Before the Convention—W. A. Blair and D. H. Blair, of Winston, Mentioned—Believed That Latter Will Be Choice—Judicial Convention Also.

Considerable interest is being taken by local Republicans in the result of the work of the Republican Congressional convention, which convenes in the court house this afternoon at 1 o'clock to nominate a candidate for Congress. There is much speculation as to who will be named by the convention.

State Chairman John Motley Morehead, who has been Congressman for the past two years, has so far refused to be put in the race again and, while a majority of the delegates to the convention want him to make the race, unless he changes his mind the convention will be compelled to look about for another man or nominate him over his protest. Nearly all the local Republicans are of the opinion that Mr. Morehead could make a much stronger race than any other man they could put up and they are going to urge him to accept the nomination.

The only men who have been mentioned prominently in case Mr. Morehead will not accept are Messrs. D. H. Blair and W. A. Blair, of Winston. It is not believed that the latter would accept, however, so after all it looks like Mr. Blair will get the nomination.

The convention will be called to order by Chairman John T. Benbow, of Winston-Salem at 1 o'clock, the hour fixed when a recess was taken on the night of August 10.

Chairman Morehead was expected in last night from a conference with President Taft at Beverly, Mass., but he did not show up, it being likely that he will arrive on the early morning train. Mr. Gilliam Grissom, State Chairman Morehead's secretary, arrived yesterday, but he could throw no light on the situation, beyond stating that Mr. Morehead did not want the nomination. It had been reported that Mr. Grissom himself might be nominated, but he laughed at the suggestion. On arrival here he gathered some information as to the several places that are being considered for Republican State headquarters and will report the same to Mr. Morehead on his arrival. The choice of headquarters will in all probability be made today.

Judicial Convention.

Immediately after the Congressional convention adjourns the delegates will organize the Judicial convention and nominate a candidate for the office of solicitor for this judicial district. It has been four years since the Democrats have had opposition either for judge or solicitor. Therefore the Judicial convention will have to organize before anything can be done. Mr. Clifford Frazier, of this city, is being mentioned as a probable candidate to oppose Solicitor S. M. Gattis, of Hillsboro.

Sunday School Picnic.

The Sunday school of Grace Methodist Protestant church picnicked at Lindley park yesterday and the occasion was one of pleasure to all who attended. The members of the school went out on a special car in the morning and spent the entire day at the park. At noon a delightful luncheon was served in the pavillion, the slight rain failing to put the least damper on the gaiety of the happy picnickers. The special car left the park about 5:30 in the afternoon and carried the smaller children to Piedmont Heights, returning to the square shortly after six o'clock.

Sunday School Picnic Today.

The Sunday school of Walnut Street M. E. church of Proximity will have their annual picnic today in the grove at the church. Dinner will be served promptly at 12 o'clock. Following the dinner ice cream and cake will be served. At 1:20 two large cars will be placed on the Walnut street switch for the children to take a street ride to Lindley Park and South Greensboro. Everybody urged to be present on time. J. F. Scurlock, Supt.

IN MUNICIPAL COURT.

All the Defendants Yesterday Were Negroes and the Charges Trivial.

The grist that ran through Judge Eure's court yesterday was of a very poor and uninteresting quality and produced no revenue for the city.

The case against Will Byrd, a negro, for assault with a deadly weapon was continued until Monday morning at the request of his attorney, Mr. Stern. Willie Turner and Tempie Griffin, two colored women from out Warnersville way, were before his honor for disorderly conduct. Willie was turned loose there being no evidence against her but witnesses testified that Tempie did some "disgraceful cussing" and she was taxed the costs in the case. The difference between "graceful" and "disgraceful" cussing was not brought out in court.

Sarah George, another negro, was arraigned on a warrant sworn out by Will Crawford, also colored, charging her with procuring 25 cents worth of liquor for the complainant. The defendant was represented by Attorney G. W. Patton who subjected the chief witness to a searching cross-examination that convinced the court that the warrant was sworn out as pure spite work and the case was dismissed.

Chief Neelley is taking a short vacation in the country and Seargeant Pearce did the honors in officially opening and closing court.

RINGLING BROS. MEN HERE.

Putting Large Banners On Every Available Wall.

The "opposition" brigade of nine men advertising the coming of the Ringling Bros. shows on October 24, arrived here yesterday and will be here today. They are putting up large cloth banners on all the buildings that the owners will permit them to cover and by the time they have finished the town will know that the "big show" is coming. The first of the regular billing cars will be here on about September 29 and will carry twenty-five billposters and lithographers who will carry on the advertising work. Two other cars, each carrying twenty-five men, will follow the first billing car in and continue the advertising up until twenty-four hours before the date of the performances. The idea of the magnitude of the advertising facilities of the modern circus can be obtained when it is stated that over one hundred men will be employed in bringing the circus.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

A number of the Sunday school workers of Greensboro went to Jamestown yesterday to attend the County Sunday School Convention. A goodly number from all over the county were in attendance and the sessions were most helpful. President S. M. Rankin and Secretary Shuford Peeler, of this city were present and at their posts. Addresses were made by Prof. W. A. Harper, J. Van Carter, secretary of field work for the State association, Messrs. T. C. Hoyle, J. C. Tate, Rev. J. W. Long, and other workers. At noon a basket dinner was served and everybody ate chicken and pie to their satisfaction. The Greensboro delegates returned last night at 6:30.

Switch Rubbers Stolen.

The street car people are frequently annoyed on account of small boys stealing the switch rubbers, the motorman being compelled to get out and throw the switch each time the car passes. There are several switches where the rubbers are used and to stop a car and change the switch means that about a minute's time is lost. This seems insignificant, but when cars are on a ten minute schedule and one car is a minute behind then all the cars are thrown off schedule. The boys are very careful not to let any of the street car people see them when the rubbers are taken.

Institute Begins Monday.

The Guilford County Teachers' Institute begins Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the Lindsay Street school building. Prof. J. A. Matheson will have charge of the institute and will be assisted by Mrs. J. A. Robinson, of Durham, who will have charge of the Primary Department, and Prof. W. C. Jackson, who will have charge of the English course. All teachers in the county are expected to attend this institute and it is necessary for them to do so if they intend teaching in the county this year.

WERELL WINS HI THIRD GAME

Fro The Champs on ome Diamond.

. Wehrell, of Anderson, was in the c yesterday. This is the third time has visited us this season—and with same result—Anderson won 2 to 1. y he has the wins from the Champs not a mystery if his work is watch- closely, for in the box he is as cool a cucumber and uses his head and at good left wing of his—a combination that is hard to overcome. The mystery is why Manager Kelly hasn't used im more this season as a pitcher for hen probably Greenville wouldn't be eeling so frisky along now. Wehrell s probably one of the most valuable men in the league. Not only is he a star outfielder and pitcher, but he is fast on his feet and on the bases is a whirlwind and his stickwork is away above the average. While he allowed seven hits in yesterday's game he did not have an earned run made off his delivery, but he did fumble the ball that caused the error to be marked up in the last inning.

Eldridge was the twirler for the locals and he did his part, giving up only five hits, three of them coming in the fatal fifth which caused the run making, but the hitting behind him was lacking at the opportune moments, he himself getting the only timely hit of the game which was a pretty two-bagger in the ninth that scored the only run. The Champs gave a perfect fielding exhibition for the third day in succession, Hicks, Fuller and Moran putting up a steady and neat article of ball. Rickard again covered himself with honor by making a great run and catching Brannon's hard one on a line in the third. Rickard seems to be improving in every game and continues to get passes on balls.

For the visitors Corbett, J. McCarthy and Smith were the stars.

The Scoring.

The scoring was done in the fifth and ninth innings in this manner: Fifth, Anderson: McEnroe flys out to left. Brannon walks and advances to second on Roth's single. Wehrell hits to Eldridge and forces Brannon at third. Corbett singles and Fuller makes a great stop to keep any runner from scoring. A. McCarthy singles and Roth and Wehrell score. Kelly out pitcher to first.

Ninth, Greensboro: Hicks walks and steals second. Moran fans. Beusse bunts and is safe on Wehrell's fumble. Eldridge hits the pill for two bases in a great attempt to win his own game and Hicks scores. Rickard fans with Eldridge on second and Beusse on third.

The Umpiring.

Umpire McGinnis was indisposed and asked to be relieved from the duties of managing the game so ex-Mayor Brandt officiated. With the exception of one decision his work was satisfactory and met with the approval of the patrons. He is not quite as nimble on his feet as Handiboe but his eye is better than Rudderham's and he is certainly the equal of Mackey in all stages of the game.

Today's Game.

Today will be the last chance to see the Electricians in action on the local grounds and they should be greeted by a big attendance. The aggregation that Manager Kelly has are not only good ball players but a clever and gentlemanly bunch of athletes and are put out by the gamest little town in the circuit. Clark the loser of the first day's contest will have a chance to redeem himself today and Tony Walters will be the chief obstacle that he will have to overcome.

They put one more across in the ninth, but when the Twins came to the bat in their half of the ninth, Laval, first man up, doubled, and Cote, Hale and King singled in quick succession, scoring Laval and leaving bases full. Anderson Sells Pitcher Byrd.

Manager Jim Kelly received a wire last night informing him that the negotiations had been closed whereby Pitcher Robbie Byrd has become the property of the St. Louis Nationals. Byrd is in the city now but will leave today and report at once to the big league. This is Byrd's first year in professional circles, Manager Kelly getting him from Erskine College in South Carolina. He is a youngster, not over 20 years old, and has a great future as a ball player before him. He is a Southern boy, hailing from the Palmetto State. The sale prices to St. Louis for the twirler has not been given out but Manager Kelly intimates that it runs into four figures.

INVESTIGATING CAUSE OF WRECK

On Norfolk & Southern Thursday Night.

From Evidence of Officials It Appears That Dead Engineer, J. O. Smith, Took Life In Hands and Without Orders Ran Engine on Main Line Rather That Wait For Belated Passenger—Several Witnesses Examined—Engineer of Passenger Improving.

Raleigh, Aug. 19.—In the court room of the corporation commission there was an investigation this morning of the causes of the collision in the Norfolk & Southern yards here last night that resulted in the death of Engineer J. O. Smith and Fireman Jno. Hodge and the serious injury of Engineer Fleming, of the passenger train from Norfolk. Division Superintendent Watkins, Trainmaster Lewis, Local Agent Gregory Cannon and Telegraph Operator Raney were the principal witnesses.

In fact the statement of Operator Raney seemed to present the direct cause of the accident from the viewpoint of the railroad company. Raney insisted that Engineer Smith undertook to carry his engine from the yards out to the turntable without an order for such a run, electing to do this and take the the risk rather than wait in the yards during the time that the incoming passenger train was late. He said that Smith came to him soon after the passenger showed up to be late and asked him if he had time to run out to the turntable with the engine and that he told him he would try and find out what the situation was and let him know. That was the last he heard from Engineer Smith, he said. And it seemed that he had taken the chances on his own initiative with the fatal result.

Asked by Commissioner McNeill if Engineer Smith had been known to take such chances before, Operator Raney's reply was that he understood that he had. That on two or three occasions his associates had warned him about such risks and he had replied: "O hell! I can't wait here in the yards all night."

All the officials examined agreed that there has been no authority issued for the yard engineer (Smith) to make the run to the turntable and that he had no right to run out on the main line as he did on the time of the passenger train without written orders signed by both the superintendent and the operator.

Engineer Fleming is improving very satisfactorily at the hospital today. Fireman Hodge, after living through five hours of awful torture while he was being extricated from the wreck where he was jammed between his engine and tender, died early this morning in an automobile as he was being carried to the hospital.

The funerals of the dead men were held this afternoon.

The building will be handsomely constructed and beautifully finished both inside and out. There will be three stories and it will contain twelve rooms. Dr. Williams will run the sanitarium on the same lines that he is conducting his present one, treating patients for alcoholism and the use of morphine.

Car Repairer Breaks His Leg.

Mr. G. T. Swing, a car repairer working for the Southern Railway, broke his leg while working on a car at Haw River yesterday morning and was brought to the city yesterday on the noon train and placed in St. Leo's hospital.

The injured man was fixing the air hose under a car, which was not attached to an engine but on a track with a slight incline, when the car started and Mr. Swing became mixed up with the brake beam, resulting in the broken limb.

ANOTHER FAILURE

(From S. F. Bulletin, May 1, '09)

Among many late letters announcing favorable results there are a number from physicians, all of whom have cases recovering, and one from Hot Springs, Ark., telling of the recovery of two physicians.

The same week a physician of this city reported a failure. He stated that he gave the Compound at the last moment in an extreme case of Bright's Disease and that he had no confidence in the treatment, and as the patient expired a few days thereafter that it confirmed his opinion. The secret of the several successes first referred to lays in the fact that the physicians realizing the admitted futility of the orthodox treatment put themselves or their patients on the compound before they were in extremis. Not so in the last case, and the reason for the failure is obvious.

Let us illustrate: We are told that there is a physician in South San Francisco by the name of Gardner who has never had a failure in a case of typhoid fever. We don't know what his method is, but will say that when his fame causes patients to be transferred to his treatment after the attending physicians have declared the case hopeless that his failures will then commence. His successes have been in cases that sent for him while there was something to work on.

It is a fact that many cases of Bright's Disease in extremis have been rescued, but there is no certainty when the treatment is withheld until the last few days. When Fulton's Renal Compound is administered in time it matters little whether the case be chronic or not nearly nine-tenths get results, the text books to the contrary notwithstanding.

We again say that the mere presence of albumen, casts and dropsy in the chronic stage that are supposed to make up an incurable case of Bright's Disease is now no bar to recovery, providing there is heart and vitality to work on. It is obvious that if the treatment is withheld until there is no recuperative power there will also be failures.

In view of the declared futility of everything known up to the development of Fulton's Renal Compound, we ask in the name of conscience how there can be any question in the mind of any human being as to what ought to be given in such cases and why there should be any delay in giving the only thing in the world that offers hope.

Fulton's Renal Compound can be had in your city of Fariss-Klutz Drug Co.

THE GIANT'S CAUSEWAY.

Formation and Appearance of This Odd Freak of Nature.

The Giant's causeway is situated at the northern extremity of County Antrim, a short distance from Port Rush, Ireland. It consists of countless hosts of basaltic pillars, varying in shape from a pentagon to an octagon, the average length of each column or pillar being about eighty feet, the whole stacked so closely together that a knife blade could hardly be inserted between them. But the formation of these pillars is not the least wonderful part about them, for, although they may be counted by thousands and tens of thousands, each column is fashioned with a symmetry that suggests a mason's handiwork. Their composition is a perfect fusion of one-half flinty earth, one-quarter lime and clay, one-quarter almost pure iron, each pillar being divided into regular lengths or joints which come together as a perfect natural ball and socket union.

Although to be found in small detachments (imbedded in the cliffs, sands, etc.) for some distance along the shore, the principal aggregations forming the causeway proper consist of three projections or tongues known as little, middle and grand causeways. These singular columns are of different lengths and present an astonishing appearance as they stand, an army of at least 40,000 strong marshaled on the shores of Erin as if ever ready to do battle with the rising tide.

THE COVETED PLANT.

Two little girls entered a florist's shop. So near each other in size were they that they would have been taken for twins. They had 20 cents—10 cents apiece—and with this sum saved from pennies for some time back they were going to buy a plant for mamma. One stepped out a little in advance of the other when the door closed behind them. The other was shy, looking timidly, but confidently, at her sister. The woman in charge of the small shop looked up as the two mites of humanity paused in front of her.

"Well?" she said encouragingly.

"We want to buy a plant," said the little spokeswoman. Then she added, in order to avoid later embarrassment, "The cheapest one you've got."

"Ah," said the florist, going to the window, "here is a nice little plant for 25 cents."

The little sister turned quickly to the other, but still smiling bravely.

"Baby, we've just missed it a nickel," she said.

Yet not three minutes later they issued from the shop bearing the plant between them, and as the woman deposited the two silver dimes in the cash drawer her eyes must have caught their gleam, for there was something shining there.—New York Times.

The Holland Primrose.

There is a plant in Holland known as the evening primrose, which grows to a height of five or six feet and bears a profusion of large yellow flowers so brilliant that they attract immediate attention, even at a great distance, but the chief peculiarity about the plant is the fact that the flowers, which open just before sunset, burst into bloom so suddenly that they give one the impression of some magical agency. A man who has seen this sudden blooming says it is just as if some one had touched the land with a wand and thus covered it all at once with a golden sheet.

Despair and Despondency

None but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued.

By BERTHA D. ALSOP

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

He was from childhood a lady killer. As a boy in knickerbockers he had given the little girls of his acquaintance flowers and invited them to have ices with him. They were not old enough to quarrel about him, but they doted on him all the same. As a youth he resembled a young Byron with his large blue eyes, his negligee flaxen hair and round white throat. Then came young manhood. By this time he found more zest in his attentions to girls, though fewer pleased him. He and they were still young enough to feel the sweetness of a flirtation, and occasionally when the denouement came he was obliged to admit to himself that he had been singed.

He had no thought of marriage, a home, children. He didn't consider himself old enough for that. When he reached twenty-seven he began to look forward to it as something that would naturally come about. At thirty-five he wished that it would come about. At forty he began to fear that it would never come. Then it occurred to him that he had better try to bring it about.

But by this time young girls had begun to consider him an elderly man. And, as for those near his own age, he had no use for them. He knew that men of forty have on rare occasions married girls half their age and both husband and wife been very happy in each other. Why not he? He resolved to make an effort.

An effort in love! He had glided naturally into so many affairs of the heart that to try to get into one seemed repugnant to him. Why had he not taken advantage of some one of these affairs to preclude the possibility of the lonely old age that was overshadowing him—why? He knew well enough why. He had always considered the game, not the reality. To have taken one of the girls he might have had would have been to give up a conquest. At least so he had regarded it at the time.

Having lost his position at home of a young man and consequently not being thrown in with young girls, he determined to go elsewhere. It was the season of outing, and he determined to go wife hunting by the sea. He had made many conquests there. Moonlight shimmering on the dancing waves had called out that which had moved many a girl to love him. True, now there were gray hairs in his moustache, and his Byronic forehead was higher than it had been, but he thought with the same surroundings he might do the trick as he had often done it before.

It was sad to see a young girl pass him without looking at him, whereas twenty years agone another of her age could not have refrained from a glance. He became acquainted with several of them, but somehow there seemed a gulf between him and them that he could not cross. These were half or less than half his age. Finally he met one between twenty-five and thirty who caught his fancy. There was this, too, about her that he did not find in the younger ones—they surprised him by acting and talking in a way that seemed childish to him. They seemed to him to have grown nearer the nursery than their prototypes. Surely the girls he had associated with when he was under twenty-five were not as frivolous as these misses. The older girl, on the contrary, talked and acted like a woman. She could be a companion to him.

He made up his mind that if he could win her he would do so. He made a few abortive efforts to make love as he would have made it fifteen or twenty years before. What he would have said and looked and acted then now seemed insipid to him. He desisted, contenting himself with the girl's companionship and showing her little attentions.

One thing troubled him. Though she accepted his attentions and listened to his chat, she did not seem to be impressed with his superior wisdom. He felt that, while she attended to what he said, she occasionally let it be known that she knew more of the subject he was talking about than he knew himself. Surely there was nothing near the nursery here. He was uncomfortable at the thought that this young woman felt him intellectually beneath her. It was rather that he felt her to be his superior.

When the season was drawing to a close he wished to bring matters to a focus. This used to be easy enough when he was a youngster playing a game. But now that he was a middle aged man, intending to tell a mature young woman that he loved her and ask her to be his wife, it seemed that the many times he had done the same thing came up to mock him.

However, he got it out.

"How times change us!" she said. "A dozen years ago, when I was sixteen, you proposed to me, and you did it beautifully. Then I thought you a god. Now, being older, I know you for a very admirable and pleasant gentleman. I thank you for the honor done me, but I am not now minded to marry."

He looked at her with a dazed expression, vainly trying to recall her as she was. But about the time of their former meeting he had proposed to too many girls to enable him to distinguish her from the rest. He arose in silence and retired.

He returned disengaged and is still a bachelor. His forehead extends to the back of his neck, his teeth are going, and he is alone.

Some of our contemporaries have been counting up the circuses billed for this section in the near future. Did they include the Honorable Walter George Newman, the millionaire with a bugler?

The Southern Republican doesn't take any stock in the argument that the recent Republican State Convention abolished the referee system. It says that it was a change in referees, "that and nothing more." Which is a conclusion that many others must also have reached.

The fact that Longworth is against Cannon does not necessarily imply, as some seem to think, that Cannon has got to go. The matter will be fought out in the Republican caucus and the "old guard" of Republicanism has demonstrated that it has plenty of fight left, as witness the way it has run over Roosevelt on several occasions recently.

Thursday Colonel Roosevelt gathered some of his close political friends around him and it was given out that a tentative plan of action was agreed on for the Colonel. The plan of action was in the nature of a paradox, to-wit, to take no action at all. The Colonel reserves the right, however, to take some action if he sees his policies getting neglected or in a fair way to get neglected and this, of course, means that he won't stay quiescent long.

Not satisfied with organizing the postoffice force into a campaign club, the administration in its desperation has now called upon its black allies and has its emissaries at work rounding them up and tagging them for the salvation of the G. O. P.—Danville Register.

So it has and it really seems that it is the worst thing politically the administration could have done, certainly so far as the South is concerned. For the party in this neck of the woods claims to be a white man's party.

Today the Democratic Congressional executive committee meets to organize for the campaign. We hope to see it launch a thoroughgoing campaign. The district is easily Democratic and the one great problem is to get out the vote. But that is no easy task. To do it will require a tremendous lot of work on the part of a considerable number of people. It is no child's play to get out the vote. The committee should go at the undertaking with a full realization of its difficulty but with the determination to get the desired results, namely, to get every Democrat in the district to the polls on election day.

Our Republican friends are doing their best to keep Marion Butler in the back ground. The Southern Republican of Charlotte says:

It is expected that ex-Senator Butler should have no hand in winning the fight as a persona non grata to some desirable citizens of the State for the reason that his peculiar talents better accord with diplomacy as practiced in old times than with modern statesmanship.

This program for Butler to stay behind the scenes and pull the strings seems to fall in well enough with his ideas. His own paper, the Caucasian, in describing convention and pre-convention matters, exploited him as little as was consistent with the facts as will be gathered from the following specimen paragraphs taken from the Caucasian's report of the convention and Morehead caucus:

At this point former Senator Marion Butler appeared on the platform and was greeted with cheers and calls for a speech. He declined to speak, however, and remained on the platform for a few moments only.

* * * *

A caucus of the Morehead forces was held in the courthouse Wednesday morning, every seat being occupied and numbers standing in the aisles. Speeches were made by Congressman Morehead, Hon. Thomas Settle, Hon. Harry Skinner and District Attorney Holton, each one brimming with sound Republican doctrine. There were many calls for ex-Senator Butler, but he did not respond, probably thinking the die had been cast favorably to Mr. Morehead anyway.

At all events North Carolinians generally will subscribe to the view of the Southern Republican that Mr. Butler's "peculiar talents" are not in complete accord with "modern statesmanship."

Representatvie Longworth has come out flatfooted against Cannon for the Speakership. He says he wouldn't have expressed his opposition to Cannon so early in the game if Mr. Cannon had not announced his candidacy so soon, thus making it an issue. Which is as much as to say that Longworth was simply looking for an excuse to give Cannon a dig. Of course, Cannon will put up the biggest sort of a fight and will call his opponents all sorts of ugly names—a prospect that naturally looks pleasing to the Democrats. In fact it looks as though the early injection of the Speakership issue into the situation with respect to the Republican camp couldn't have been a better stroke for the Democrats if they had themselves have had the choice. Speaking of the dissensions of the Republicans the Baltimore Sun says:

The present differences and divisions in the Republican party are apparently irreconcilable because they are differences in principles. The division of the party in New York in the Garfield adminstration into "stalwarts" and "half-breeds" was a quarrel over the spoils of office which did not greatly concern the masses of the voters. Such differences are capable of adjustment. But the present line of division goes deeper and seems to be quite as serious as that which split the Democratic party in 1860. The present division is a line between reaction and progress, between an enlightened regard to the spirit of the times and the increasing intelligence and independence of thought among the body of the voters on the one hand and the appeal to party bigotry and the use of the party as an agency to promote special interests on the other.

This dissension in the Republican party is likely to result in the election of Democratic Congressmen in many states, and a gain of 23 will make the House Democratic. There is no room for gain in Indiana, where the Republican dissension is fiercest, as the Republicans have in the present Congress only 2 members out of 13, a smaller Republican representation than either Kentucky or North Carolina sends. But the Democrats ought to make gains in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and other States.

BOY TRAMPER.

Small Negro En Route Danville To Lexington Refuses to Beg or Beat Ride.

Early Lee, a small negro boy, arrived in the city yesterday about noon from Danville, being on his way to Lexington. The boy stated that he had eaten nothing in two days and was given a handsome dinner by a liberal hearted citizen, to which he did thorough justice. Then Lee told his story. His mother had sent him to Danville to visit relatives and he arrived there only to find that his relations were dead. Left alone and penniless in the Virginia city he turned his face homeward and without anything to eat reached Greensboro in a sore and hungry condition. He was supplied with a pass to Lexington and sent on his way rejoicing. The most remarkable thing about the affair is that the negro did not attempt to hobo on a freight, which he could have easily done although he might have been caught. But he refused to beg food or shelter and slept in the woods Thursday night, he states. However, he appeared to appreciated greatly the assistance tendered him here.

THE DETECTIVE AND THE PROHIBITION LAW

Is He a Help Or a Hindrance?—This Question Discussed by Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League.

To The Editor:

Today among the citizens of this State, it is a mooted question as to whether the detective employed by individuals is a help or a hindrance to the enforcement of the prohibition law. Having had some experience and much observation on this point in the last three years, I have reached pronounced convictions and feel that I must give them to our temperance workers over the State.

I have no purpose to discourage the use of detectives when employed by the city, county or state government; in fact I believe that if any municipality or county finds that the regular executive force is not sufficient to enforce the prohibition law or any other law, it is the business of that government to employ the services of detectives or to institute some other method to aid the prevailing method, whereby the violators of all laws may be apprehended. The fact that we have an executive branch of government carries with it the duty of executing law and this is the sole official trust of officers in their executive function. I believe that any movement on the part of a few citizens to relieve them of the responsibility that their oath of office has placed upon them or that even has a tendency to relieve them of such responsibility, in the long run, will hinder rather than help the execution of law.

Therefore my conviction is that it is an unwise policy for a few citizens in any locality to undertake the execution of our prohibition laws apart from the local officers and administration. On the surface this plan seems at times to bring good results, but we fail to note the bad results brought as well. In the first place, when citizens employ outside force, the regular officers and executive administrators feel that they are largely excused by the people from doing what their oath of office pledges them to, and if they are not disposed to do their duty, they will be only too glad to shift this responsibility. In the second place, when detectives are employed by individuals, their evidence is not respected by the courts and jurors as it is when the detectives are employed by the administration and paid with the people's money. In the first place, he is the agent of one or more individuals, in the second place, he is an authorized officer of the municipality or county and every court will give more heed to his evidence.

Again when individuals employ detectives to ferret out liquor lawlessness, the officers afterwards, when there is liquor lawlessness, will play hands off and wait for the individuals to again employ detectives. While the liquor seller or manufacturer knows that this detective is not constantly on the ground and if one has been at work in August, he will not likely be working in the same community for the next five or six months. They are on the watch for the detectives, but are not afraid of the officers. On the other hand, when the officers are vigilant and faithful, the would-be liquor violator is always afraid because he knows that the regular officer is on the ground, with eyes and ears open, all the time.

My experience in using detectives has not been altogether satisfactory, and my observation of the way some juries have treated their evidence is altogether unsatisfactory. I have observed further that those communities in North Carolina that put the responsibility upon the officers and do not use detectives, except as the administration uses them, have the best conditions prevailing, and are the freest from liquor manufacturing and liquor selling.

On the other hand, we have cases in our state where the citizens have made up large purses, employed detectives and lawyers, apart from the local government, to execute their law, and their conditions are bad, possibly no better than they would have been had not the detective been used. Having viewed this question from every standpoint, I have concluded that the detective employed by the individuals and paid by just a few is a hindrance rather than a help in the execution of our law.

One might ask then, what is the remedy when the officers do not stand for the enforcement of the law and the citizens are like the officers? As I see it, the only remedy for such condition is agitation and education. I can very readily conceive of a true citizen standing for license, but I cannot conceive of any true citizen standing for lawlessness. I believe when our people are taught the duties of citizenship that we will find in every county and town in North Carolina, men, who have the true spirit of patriotism and loyalty to their county, that will stand for the execution of all law, not considering the fact that they advocated or opposed the law, but considering only the fact that any violator of law is an enemy to the state, a hindrance to good government and a curse to the community; and being such they will have patriotism and courage sufficient to report and to punish such an individual. As I see it, North Carolina at this time must have a great deal of education through the press and pulpit, showing every citizen that his oath commits him to uphold law and that means the tearing down of lawlessness.

N. C. Anti-Saloon League.

A BANANA TREE.

Contrary to popular belief, bananas do not grow on the tree as they hang in the grocery, but with the small end of the fruit pointing upward—to all appearances upside down.

There is probably no other fruit of such universal consumption about which so little is known to the average person as the banana. Scarcely one man in a thousand not connected with the business knows what a banana tree looks like.

The fruit is never allowed to ripen on the tree, but is cut half or three-quarters "full"—that is, half to three-quarters developed, according to the distance it is to be shipped—and comes to maturity by feeding from the stalk, which contains a large amount of sap. Bananas cut in this way attain practically the same size as if allowed to remain on the tree, in which case the bunch becomes too much of a burden for its support and either falls or breaks the tree and ripens on the ground.

After the cutting the plantation is "cleaned," which merely consists of severing the standing trunks within a few feet of the ground, and a new tree comes forth from the remains of its predecessor, so that the fruit in all stages of growth is to be found at the same time, and the yield is continuous.

FREAKS OF A GENIUS.

The Man Who Smashed Glasses In a London Tavern.

One day a bulky, tall, pale faced gentleman with bushy, restless eyebrows entered a London tavern. The waiter did not ask him for his order, but immediately brought him a plate of bread and cheese and a glass of ale. Having consumed his lunch, the guest sat upright in his chair for awhile, leaning his hands on a heavy walking cane and staring blankly at the opposite wall as if in a dream. Of a sudden he gave a start. He seized the empty glass and dashed it to the floor with all his might, smashing it to atoms. He then reflected for a moment, laid a coin on the table, got up and left the inn without a word to any one. After his departure another guest had the curiosity to ask the waiter whether the gentleman who had just gone out was not wrong in his head. Quoth the waiter:

"Oh, no, sir! That's nothink unusual with 'im, sir. 'E's broke maybe a 'undred glasses since 'e's been a-comin' to this 'ouse. 'E don't seem to know it when 'e does it. 'E just gits a-thinkin' and seems to git hangry at somethink 'e's thinkin' about. It's the great Lord Macaulay, sir."—St. James' Gazette.

The Name Cuba.

Cuba is the name by which the island was originally known to the Lucayan Indians, who were with Columbus when he discovered it. One of its villages or cities was called by them Cubanacan, and it is reported that from the similarity of sounds Columbus, still supposing himself to be on the coast of Asia, imagined that this must be a city of Kublai Khan, the Tartar sovereign celebrated by Marco Polo. The survival of the original name for Cuba is a remarkable instance of persistence, as the island has been baptized and rebaptized many times since its European discovery. Columbus first called it Juana in honor of Prince John, the son of Ferdinand and Isabella. After Ferdinand's death it was called in his memory Fernandina. Subsequently this name was changed to Santiago, after St. James, the patron saint of Spain. Still later it was named Ave Maria, in honor of the Virgin Mary. But none of these names held, and the Indian name is still preserved.

Rice In the Orient.

Rice is kept for use in the orient in its husk, just like horse oats or unthrashed wheat. It is called "paddy" and is beaten or thrashed for daily use. But pure husked rice is too rough and unattractive looking for world markets, so it is polished in revolving cylinders with French chalk to make it pretty, pearly and smooth. But this robs it of its outer layer and most valuable food qualities. Polished rice is regarded as poison in Japan and is known to produce the dreadful epidemic disease beriberi in Japanese who live too exclusively on a rice diet and eating little or no meat.—Exchange.

AMOY'S GRAVEYARDS.

The City and the Cemeteries Are Hopelessly Intermingled.

The city of Amoy is on an island of the same name. For upward of 1,000 years it has been an important trading place. The population of the island is estimated at over 400,000, and it has been said that there are something like 5,000,000 dead bodies packed in its soil. For many centuries the hillsides of the city have been used as a burying ground. Now the city and the cemetery are hopelessly mixed. The graves touch one another at every point and form a solid white surface of rock, brick, porcelain and cement, covering more than 1,000,000 square feet. Near one of the joss houses 30,000 bodies are buried vertically to save space. They stand on a plot of ground of as many feet square.

The wells from which the city draws its water supply are shallow and are sunk on the edge of graveyards and even among the tombs themselves. The water is muddy and is colored by the perpetual turning up of the soil. It has no sewers, and the streets vary from two feet to six feet in width. No wheeled vehicles can use them. Here and there is an open place or plaza, dug out so as to be a huge receptacle into which the streets discharge their refuse. Filth abounds, and its twin sister, disease, flourishes. The atmosphere is laden with noxious smells, and the burial of the dead goes on at an alarming rate.

The Zulu Diamond Miner.

As showing the loyalty of the Zulu diamond miners Sir William Crookes described an amusing incident which came to his knowledge when at Klipdam. The Zulu had been superintending a gang of natives on a small claim at the river washings. It yielded but few stones, and the owner sold the claim, handing over the plant and the small staff, the Zulu remaining to look after the business till the new owner took possession. In the course of a few months the purchaser became dissatisfied with his bargain, not a single diamond having turned up since the transfer. One night the Zulu came to his old master in a mysterious manner and, laying a handful of diamonds on the table, said: "There, boss, are your diamonds. I was not going to let the new man have any of them!"

King and Commons.

King James I. of England, although keenly alive to his own divine right, yet recognized the power of the house of commons. Sir Robert Cotton was one of the twelve members to carry the famous declaration against monopolies to the king of Newmarket. When the king caught sight of them he called out, "Oh, chairs, chairs, here be twal' kynges comin'." His majesty mounted his horse on one occasion to find his usually quiet steed in a restive mood. "The de'il i' my saul, sirrah," said the king to the prancing brute, "and you be no quiet I's send you to the 500 kings in the house of commons. They'll quickly tame you."

Crossroads Burials.

Formerly it was a general custom to erect crosses at the junction of four roads on a place self consecrated according to the piety of the age. Suicides and notoriously bad characters were frequently buried near to these, not with the notion of indignity, but in a spirit of charity, that, being excluded from holy rites, they by being buried at crossroads might be in places next in sanctity to ground actually consecrated. — Westminster Gazette.

Like a Woman.

"If you'll notice," said Finnick, "the poets invariably say 'she' when referring to the earth. Why should the earth be considered feminine?"

HOW MEXICANS DISPOSE OF THEIR DEAD.

A custom that must seem very strange to many of us, says a writer in the September Wide World Magazine, is the method of disposing of the dead which obtains in Mexican, Filipino, and other Roman Catholic Spanish cemeteries. The bodies are not deposited in the ground, but in niches in a wall, the openings being then sealed with stone slabs lettered with the names of the deceased. These niches are let by Church at a yearly fee, and the body reposes peacefully therein so long as the rent is paid. When it ceases to be paid, however, the remains are ousted for non-payment. The bodies which are "evicted" for non-payment of sepulchre rent are turned into mummies by the mild, dry climate of that region. These mummified bodies are kept for a year, and if at the end o fthat time the relatives of the deceased have not paid another year's rent to reinstate the corpse, the remains are thrown unceremoniously into a great underground vault fifty feet deep and about three hundred feet in length.

GALLAGHER TO ROOSEVELT

Washington Correspondent New York Times.)

The records of the Treasury Department show that James J. Gallagher, who attempted to assassinate Mayor Gaynor, was a grumbling office holder of long standing. In addition to his letters to President McKinley and other officials his most notable achievement in the way of complaint seems to have been a letter he wrote in 1902 to President Roosevelt, saying that his Roosevelt leanings had caused him to be dismissed by Wilbur Wakeman, then Appraiser of the Port of New York. The letter follows; the spelling, punctuation and capitalization are Gallagher's:

New York, July 30, 1902.

Your Excellency: Mr. President I received this communication from Washington the inclosed. I never was a laborer what I was when Mr. Wakeman dismissed me I was doing clerical Work, but was appointed as an Opener and packer. Now Mr. President you see how your friends were treated by Mr. Wakeman I might have been their yet but I was too ROOSEVELT man and my poor Head was chooped off.

as I a still on the Eligible list for Court attendant now doubt if you would be kind enough I could procure some place hoping you will do the favor fore one who has stood by you and will still continue to do so. Your humble,

Servant,

James J. Gallegher.

There is nothing in the records to show that President Roosevelt replied to the letter.

FUNERAL COSTUMES.

Sumptuary mourning laws were formerly found necessary in England to restrict the extravagance of the nobility and their imitators in the matter of funeral costume. At the end of the fifteenth century it was laid down that dukes, marquises and archbishops should be allowed sixteen yards of cloth for their gowns, "sloppes" (mourning cassocks) and mantles; earls fourteen, viscounts twelve, barons eight, knights six and all persons of inferior degree only two. Hoods were forbidden to all except those above the rank of esquire of the king's household.

In the following century Margaret, countess of Richmond, mother of Henry VII., issued an ordinance for the "reformation of apparel for great estates of women in tyme of mournings." So it seems that men and women have met in the extravagance of sorrow.

Even 200 years ago London tradesmen found that court mourning seriously affected their business. Addison relates that at a tavern he often met a man whom he took for an ardent and eccentric royalist. Every time this man looked through the Gazette he exclaimed, "Thank God, all the reigning families of Europe are well." Occasionally he would vary this formula by making reassuring remarks respecting the health of British royalists. After some time Addison discovered that this universal royalist was a colored silk merchant, who never made a bargain without inserting in the agreement, "All this will take place as long as no royal personage dies in the interval."—London Chronicle.

Slim Chance For Her.

A missionary who was making his way through a backwoods region came upon an old woman sitting outside a cabin. He entered upon a religious talk and finally asked her if she didn't know there was a day of judgment coming.

"Why, no," said the old lady; "I hadn't heerd o' that. Won't there be more than one day?"

"No, my friend; only one day," was replied.

"Well, then," she mused, "I don't reckon I can get to go, for we've only got one mule, and John always has to go everywhere first."—New York Sun.

Might Help Some.

"It's up to you to do something to help our Neighborhood Improvement association."

"I'm for it. I'll make my daughter sell her piano."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THOUSANDS OF METEORITES FALL EVERY HOUR.

Meteors, or shooting stars, as they are more generally called, have from the beginning of things been bombarding the world at a rate estimated by the highest authority at many thousands an hour, of which, however, an average of only five or six are visible to the naked eye during the same period of time. Fortunately, owing to our protecting envelope of air, very few of these missiles reach us. In size, meteors vary from a few ounces to many pounds in weight and it is only very occasionally that one is of sufficient dimensions to survive the passage of eighty to one hundred miles through an atmosphere increasing in density as the earth is approached. The speed at which they enter the atmosphere, calculated at not less than thirty-five miles a second, generates such intense heat by friction that the iron of which the meteor principally consists is immediately reduced to an incandescent vapor, which is the luminous train so frequently seen in the heavens on a clear night. The vapor rapidly cools, and condenses in form of these minute particles, which assume the spherical form as does shot during its fall from the top of the tower. Finally, the little spheres are scattered by the winds and currents in the upper regions, and gradually descend in their millions as in an invisible but never-ending shower.—From the September Strand Magazine.

Where Cost Doesn't Count.

Chicago News.

"I hear you are going to quit the grocery business," said the customer. "Is it true?"

"It is," answered the grocer. "I'm tired of hearing men complain about high prices and growl about the expense of living."

"What are you going to do?" queried the customer.

"I'm going to start a saloon," answered the grocer.

"That new arrival says he is a light sleeper," said the summer hotel clerk. "I'm glad you told me," remarked the proprietor. "Charge him extra for light."

"Have you any men serving sentences for bigamy?" asked the prison visitor. "Lots of them," replied the keeper," but we confine them all in the insane ward."
